The Department of History at Florida International University is conducting an open search for a tenure-track Assistant Professor in Modern American History, specializing in the United States and the World, beginning fall semester, 2019. Particular areas of interest include urban, immigration, environment, law, economy, women and gender, borderlands, Latinx, and/or African American history. Candidates with experience in public history and digital humanities are especially encouraged to apply. The teaching load will be two courses per semester. The person to be hired would offer courses at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, and not only contribute to our transnational PhD program with emphasis in Atlantic Civilizations, but also interface with relevant programs in the Steven J. Green School for International and Public Affairs, or the Wolfsonian-FIU Museum, as appropriate. The selected candidate must demonstrate commitment to service to the department, college, and university; to direct graduate research; to direct dissertations, MA reports and honor theses; and to publish actively. We strongly encourage historically underrepresented minorities and people with experience in teaching diverse student populations to apply.

Qualified candidates must have a PhD in hand by August 19, 2019 and are encouraged to apply to Job Opening ID 516392 at <https://facultycareers.fiu.edu/> and attach a cover letter discussing both teaching and research interests, a c.v., sample syllabi, an article-length writing sample, and unofficial transcripts, in a single pdf file. Please send a second copy of all application materials to history@fiu.edu To receive full consideration, applications and required materials should be received by December 14, 2018. Review will continue until position is filled. The salary will be commensurate with the candidate’s previous career and achievement. Email questions to Dr. Kenneth Lipartito, Chair Search Committee:
